

INSIGHT

APRIL 2020

WTC Community Weekly

ISSUE 01

Good day!

The last couple of months or so we have witnessed quite a few of major surprises. From the probability of World War III, Megxit, Liverpool so close to winning the league, to the distressing COVID-19 pandemic that we are still facing today.

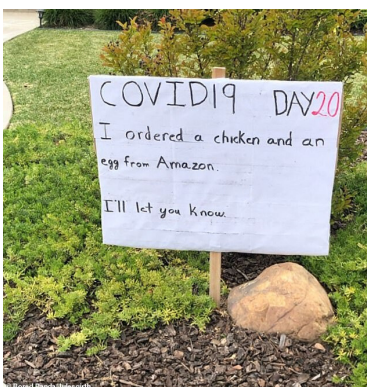

Here, on the very first edition of the WTC Community Weekly, we are not going to discuss all that. No. I'm sure you've had enough of it from the media, your Whatsapp Groups, or even your next-door neighbours.

However, I feel like it's also important to highlight the positives from the current situation. For examples, people practicing better personal hygiene, making the most of time spent with their loved ones, and appreciating the things we took for granted such as a simple walk in the park or just be out and about.

Let's also take this time to applaud the medical personnel all around the world. As well as everyone on the frontline. There are also ways where we can help and contribute too. Donation is of course one of them, volunteering is another but as it was once said - laughter is the best medicine.

Ah, yes, jokes. It's one way to keep you happy, healthy and sane during this difficult time.

Like yesterday I read this news on BoredPanda.com of a man trying to cheer up his street in L.A. by placing daily dad joke placards on his lawn. It was an instant hit during the lockdown. Isn't that sweet?!

“

Share your funny WFH stories for a chance to be featured on the next issue!

Now, I would like to get to know you better through the WTC Community. I want to know who you are, your hobbies, what you like to do. The idea is to get you and everyone who share the same interests connected - at least online, for now. We want to help you expand your network around the WTC Complex. We want you to have a balanced working life. And of course we'll have events and activities planned out for you, all in due time.

So, first order of business, what should we call our community? I was thinking... Jaklanders?

Drop me your ideas to stara.pedro@jakland.co.id and we'll discuss this together.

Stay safe everyone.

Yours trully,
the community editor