Eid Mubarak

It is two days before the most anticipated religious holiday celebrated by Muslims worldwide. Eid-al Fitr is nearly here.

New clothes have been bought, money have been exchanged into smaller banknotes, and it's as if you can almost taste the ketupat, the opor ayam, and the rendang already. All the excitement building up to it after a month of fasting.

"Selamat hari raya Idul Fitri. Minal Aidin wal Faizin, mohon maaf lahir dan bathin" is a common greeting used in Indonesia. The Arabic part translates to "May you be among those who return [to purity] and among those granted victory."

In recent times, that particular part has been replaced with "Taqabbalallahu Minna Waminkum", meaning "May Allah accept [good deeds] from you and us", said to be the more accurate expression for the celebration.

Eid-al Fitr serves as a great reminder to be grateful for what we have and to share with those who may be less fortunate. To show gratitude to God after a month of reflection.

And with that in mind, on behalf of Jakarta Land and the World Trade Centre complex, we wish you a safe and blessed Eid Mubarak.

Yours truly,
