WTC COMMUNITY WEEKLY

Up, up and Away

Recently the news is all about sky-high airline ticket prices and talks to raise entrance fees to the stupa area of the historical Borobudur temple.

Does it mean tourism is improving after the pandemic? Perhaps yes, in a way. Does it deter people's interests? Unlikely.

A "revenge travel", a term used to describe when people look for flights in a rush after being grounded by Covid-19 for more than two years, is on the rise. Add that to the increased jet fuel price, high flights demand and low available fleet, and you'll get an unbelievably expensive trip.

For example, a roundtrip flights to Singapore, a favourite for many Indonesians, in early July would cost at least Rp 6.2 millions, and that's with LCCs. Normally? Could be less than Rp 2 million.

So, what's your plan for this school holiday?

Yours truly,
