WORKING MOTHERS

A recently passed law governing the rights of women and children during the first 1,000 days of a child’s life paves the way for longer maternity leave.

The law stipulates that a female worker is eligible for three months of maternity leave at the shortest, and can be prolonged for another three months in certain medical conditions, as proven by a statement from a doctor.

Going back to work after giving birth can be quite daunting. Apart from catching up what’s been happening at the office, that guilty feeling of leaving your newborn at home or daycare is very real. Added with having to pump every two hours to meet that golden 6-month exclusive breastfeeding period and avoiding mastitis at the same time. Juggling all these can be stressful.

If you are a nursing mother, you can relax and pump at our nursing rooms at WTC 2 retail area and WTC 1 lobby. You can also join the WTC Working Moms community and receive invitations to specific events, such as the one next week. Scan the QR for more information.
