Eid Al Adha and Foods to Celebrate

Eid al-Adha or also known as Lebaran Hajj this year fall on July 20, 2021. This moment is an opportunity for Muslims to 'sacrifice' either goats or cows, and then at the same time get sacrificial meat to cook and eat together family.

If some people prefer to cook rendang or satay, the sacrificial meat can be made into other dishes, for example by making stews, brongkos, or steaks. Of the several choices of processed meat, here are five of them that you can take into consideration for cooking.

- Curry - with abundant spices, curry has a savory taste and is delicious to eat at any time.
- Oxtail soup - one of the favorite dishes of Indonesians, The tender meat and savory gravy are suitable to be eaten with rice.
- Empal - for those of you who want to feel a savory taste with a touch of sweetness.
- Stew - for spicy lovers, you can add this meat and potato combination dish with large red chilies to give it a spicy taste.
- Satay - one of the favorite foods of Indonesians. If you don't want to eat Indonesian-style dishes, then you can make it into satay for barbeque.

So, what's your favourite food this year? Share with us at @wtcjakarta on Instagram. And as always, if you do plan on gathering with your family, remember to always comply with the health protocols, the 3Ms.

Yours trully,
