INSIGHT

WTC COMMUNITY WEEKLY

Christmas is a season not only of rejoicing but of reflection.

Winston Churchill

Merry Christmas!

And so the countdown begins.

24 hours to the day that many have been waiting for. And not just by those who celebrate it, but for everyone who welcomes the day off that comes with it (okay, three if you count the weekend).

Christmas in Indonesia is relatively the same as the rest of the world. A mass on Christmas Eve and Christmas morning, a family meal at home, presents under the tree and oh never forget, the Home Alone movies marathon on local TV.

There are of course age-old traditions such as candle-lit choir of Malam Kudus ('O Holy Night) and nativity scene as part of a drama performance during church services. Do you have other traditions in your hometown or in your family?

And if you do plan on gathering with your loved ones, remember to always comply with the health protocols, the 3Ms. Last but not least, on behalf of everyone at Jakarta Land and the WTC, selamat hari Natal, and peace be with you.

Yours trully,
the community editor
